

Having been both born and raised in Lubbock, Sandra Chatham has also lived her entire life here in her hometown. Presently retired from her professional career at Covenant Health System/Saint Joseph Health System, Sandra has additionally made a career as a longstanding community advocate throughout the Lubbock community. Her involvement has included service to the City of Lubbock by serving on their transportation board. Sandra is also the founder and director of HOME Ministries, an East Lubbock nonprofit organization created more than 20 years ago and designed to help others move forward when faced with life's struggles. HOME Ministries is dedicated to making lasting connections within the Lubbock community and has collaborated with other organizations, such as Catholic Family Services and HEB, to provide rent and utility assistance, childcare options and food assistance to those in need. Sandra also works with Lubbock Habitat for Humanity, serving as a Home Service Coordinator, and focuses upon Habitat's goal of bringing more economic opportunities to East Lubbock by building 80 homes within the City's Talkington Addition. She has said Habit for Humanities' vision with this particular project is "not just about affordable housing, but the chance to build a legacy for future East Lubbock residents." Sandra Chatham has continually demonstrated an amazing passion for the Lubbock community she loves so much.
